Welcome to FOP

This is an example of FOP , an XSL formatter by James Tauber. It is early days, but FOP is increasingly supporting more and more formatting objects.

What follows is a list.

1. This is item one. It is going to go for a little longer to see if this list-item-body correctly wraps. There, that should be enough.

2. This is item two. It has two blocks in the body. This is the first.
   This is the second.

3. This is item three.

This is an example of FOP. This paragraph has to be long enough that it wraps so I can test out text-align. That means I have to keep going and going until I get at least a few lines to play with. I wonder if that's enough. Let me go and check. This is an example of FOP. This paragraph has to be long enough that it wraps so I can test out text-align. That means I have to keep going and going until I get at least a few lines to play with. I wonder if that's enough. Let me go and check.